The future of plastics

requires a consistent thinking in material cycles. How can plastic products finish their lifetime no longer as waste, but as valuable components of natural or technical cycles? Quite a lot of such materials and technologies do already exist, a lot of them are in progress, and some are just a vision. The two events in Halle (Saale) make the latest developments visible for innovative processors and applicators and enable the direct exchange with scientists and researchers.

BIOPOLYMER – Processing & Moulding

Since its premiere in 2018, the BIOPOLYMER congress attracts processors and applicators, manufacturers, suppliers and researchers of biobased, biodegradable plastics to the HALLE MESSE. Participants and speakers of the first two events came from Europe, Asia and overseas.

MKT – Mitteldeutscher Kunststofftag

Started in 2009, the MKT grew up to the flagship event of the plastics economy in central Germany – unfolding a supraregional and international attraction. In 2020 the conference focuses on the topic „Circular Economy & Resources Efficiency“. Conceptual sponsors of MKT are the associations of plastics industry in Brandenburg, Thuringia, Saxony and Saxony-Anhalt and several partners.

Accompanying exhibition with Application Village

Newest materials, technologies and products in the fields of biopolymers, circular economy and resources efficiency become visible and touchable in the attached exhibition. The integrated „Application Village“ presents finalized research and development projects for which partners and investors are sought.

BIOPOLYMER Innovation Award

Who will get the coveted trophies, donated by POLYKUM for outstanding innovations in the field of biobased, biodegradable plastics in 2020? The secret will be discovered at the awards ceremony at the end of the first congress day.

As in the previous year the winners will present their prize-decorated projects in the accompanying exhibition and also in the final lessons of the BIOPOLYMER – Processing & Moulding congress.

Applications for the BIOPOLYMER Innovation Awards 2020 can be admitted after the publication of the invitation in December 2019. You can find further information and our reminding service on the award's website:
